An Excellent Work of Art.

One of the best pure line engravings we ever saw, if not in fact the best, is LITTLEFIELD'S PORTRAIT OF GEN. GRANT. It is indeed Grant himself—not a poetically distant resemblance, nor an ideal cloud behind which the man's features are indistinctly and vaguely visible. Grant's face, unluckily for the ideal painter, is one of those that cannot be idealized. Washington's could; so could Lincoln's. Their features were altogether unlike those of anybody else. Nobody ever saw a man who resembled either Washington or Lincoln. Their features were as different as two faces well could be, but each so entirely unique that a picture bearing even a slight resemblance is at once recognized. Hence they are defined with safety and facility by the brush and pencil of enthusiastic genius.

But a likeness of Grant must be a perfect likeness, or it becomes at once as much a likeness of ten thousand other men as of him. Hence the engraving from Marshall's portrait of Grant looks like a photograph from a basswood bust.

We have not seen the original painting by Littlefield, but of the engraving we hardly know what else to say than that it is Grant exactly, Grant precisely, Grant in every lineament. This engraving is certainly a superior production, and possesses a high value for all such as want a picture of Grant just as he is. We refrain from discussing its artistic merits in technical terms and from a professional standpoint, as that is a department of the subject about which the general public has no concern.

Mr. Stoddard, No. 102 Washington street, is agent for the picture, and we unhesitatingly recommend to every one who ever saw Grant to go up there and look at his portrait.

LITTLEFIELD'S GRANT.—There is no question, among those most intimate with Gen. Grant, as to the excellence and accuracy of Gugler's engraving of Littlefield's Grant. As a likeness, we have never seen it excelled by any engraving of any individual; as a work of art, the engraving, though not as elaborate as some we have seen, in its execution, is still no discredit to the engraver as a line engraver. It is rare that it is equalled in this respect. We can commend this engraved portrait of Gen. Grant to all who may desire an accurate likeness executed in first-class style. J. A. Stoddard & Co., 102 Washington street, are the agents. Chicago

LITTLEFIELD'S PORTRAIT OF GRANT.—One thousand of these portraits have been sold in Washington, where Gen. Grant is best known. An agent has arrived here from that city to canvass among our citizens for its sale. He shows the autographs of most of the distinguished men in Washington in indorsement of the excellence and accuracy of this portrait.

"GRANT." Mr. Stoddard has laid upon our table a Littlefield's line engraving of the gentleman from Galena. It is the size of Marshall's Lincoln, and strikes us as a remarkably good picture. It has not been smoothed out of character, but gives the face of the iron, reticent, dogged, persistent, pounding general. Looking at it we can see how he removed his cigar and dictated to Sheridan the laconic order "Go in," and how he brought Buckner down by his reply of "Unconditional surrender. I propose to move immediately upon your works."

We venture that the man who saw Grant's face amid the thunders of battle will endorse this portrait.

Mr. William H. Bronde, who sold one thousand copies in Washington, and whose autograph book of subscriptions bears the names of Grant's intimate friends, soldier and civilian, is in Chicago to superintend the sale of the portrait.

PORTRAIT OF GEN. GRANT. To J. A. Stoddard & Co., 102 Washington street, we are indebted for a copy of Gugler's pure line engraving of Littlefield's portrait of Gen. Grant. Those who are better qualified to judge than we are pronounce it the best likeness of him yet executed, and the General himself says emphatically, "I regard Mr. Littlefield's portrait of myself as the best ever engraved." The copy before us is certainly a very fine picture, giving to the countenance, which is so often represented as stolid and commonplace, that expression of thoughtfulness and vigor, and complete self-possession and shrewdness, which stamps the picture at once as the work of a real artist. The more closely the details of the engraving are examined the more fully will its real excellence be perceived, and we have no hesitation in recommending those who wish a good portrait of the General to obtain this one. W. H. Braund, Esq., of Washington, D. C., will call upon the citizens of Chicago and exhibit this picture. His subscription book contains the names of nearly every Republican Senator and Representative as well as of other distinguished persons.
